INDIAN PACKAGING INDUSTRY

Packaging is the fifth largest sector in India's economy and is one of the highest growth sectors in the country. According to the Packaging Industry Association of India (PIAI), the sector is growing at 22% to 25% per annum. The packaging industry in India is anticipated to reach $73.6 bn by FY2020, due to India's growing population and income levels.

FACTORS DRIVING THE GROWTH OF INDIAN PACKAGING INDUSTRY

RISING POPULATION

According to the projection of United Nations Population Division, India's population will stabilize at 1.72 billion by year 2060. India will overtake China by 2020, which is a decade sooner than the earlier projection.

CHANGING LIFESTYLES

In recent years, India has witnessed a huge transformation in the consumer lifestyle. By mid-century, half of India's population, about 830 million people, is expected to be urban dwellers. This is the basic reason behind drastically rising demand for the attractive and unique packaging by adjusting to consumer attitudes and behaviours

INCREASE IN INCOME LEVEL

With per capita income expected to increase 10.2%, discretionary spending is also expected to increase to 45% by 2025. An increase in living standards and personal disposable income has increased consumption across a broad range of products, with subsequent growth in demand for the packaging.
